

Grey Partridge . Yellow Wagtail. Motacilla flava is the birds I found in the forest near me well that's what google says.

I really liked the yellow wagtail it was so graceful and so beautiful it wasn't singing at the time but I heard many birds sing in the forest all trying to communicate with each other which was so nice to listen too we had a picnic in the garden and the birds were also joining in with their voices There was also lots of crescendos music there it sounded a bit like they were arguing sometimes. But although I didn't hear many birds in the morning although the peacock was so loud it woke me up every morning it doesn't let me sleep but it made me feel as though I was In a farm waking me up all the time .

I still can't believe how fast the fly it's really amazing!

Back to the peacock i hear in the morning and evening it walks around our house like it's the queen and takes her time but when she opens her feathers it's really pretty.

What is amazing is that all the birds make different noises still I will not know which is which but all of their voices are different.

And their colours are so vibrant and when they flap their wings I can't even hear it it's so fast!

Whenever I feel claustrophobic in the woods because of all the trees that are near me but when they sing i feel less claustrophobic .
