The Purcell School Expands Brass Department to Welcome Brass Band Instrumentalists

The Purcell School, the UK's oldest specialist music school, is delighted to announce the expansion of its Brass Department, now welcoming applications from young brass band instrumentalists. This exciting development, led by Head of Wind, Brass and Percussion, Mike Cavanagh, opens the door for talented cornet, tenor horn, baritone and euphonium players to study at the internationally renowned music school.

Situated in Bushey, Hertfordshire, on the outskirts of London, The Purcell School has long been a centre of excellence for brass players, offering exceptional training for trumpet, French horn, trombone and tuba. The department's expansion reflects the School's commitment to nurturing the next generation of brass musicians across a broader range of instruments.

Students benefit from expert tuition, world-class performance opportunities and an unparalleled programme of events at leading concert venues across London. With a rich tradition of developing outstanding young musicians, The Purcell School provides an inspiring environment where brass players can thrive.

Find Out More

The Purcell School welcomes applications from aspiring brass musicians. Prospective students and their families are encouraged to attend one of our upcoming Open Mornings to experience life at the School and learn more about the opportunities available.
